CAPT. M'DONNELL'S FUNERAL

A GREAT THRONG ASSEMBLED AT A BRAVE

Well-Known People at the Funeral.

"There never was a more popular man on the force than Lightning Charlie," said ex-Alderman Morris, as he stood near the steps of the late Capt. McDonnell's residence in King street this morning, watching the surging crowds jostling each other in their efforts to obtain a position in the line and gain a last glimpse of the well known features over which the grave was so soon to close,

It was evidently true, for the street'in both directions from Varick to McDougall was crowded with men, women and children, who had braved the sweltering heat of the sun to honor the memory of the brave commander they had known and respected so long.

The undertaker had finished his labor by

The undertaker had finished his labor by 6 o'clock this morning and the body lay in a handsome casket in the little front parlor, surrounded with beautiful floral gifts from his friends and comrales, and candles burning with a dim light at the head.

The room was heavily draped in black. Between the windows stood a huge cross, six feet high, of white rosss and lilies, with a wreath of unmortelles, a gift from the Superintendent, inspectors and captains of police.

perintendent, inspectors and captains of police.

Behind the lid of the casket, which was thrown back, showing the remains at full length in captain's uniform, was a collection of floral crosses, harps, columns and pillars, many of which had been sent in by members of his own precinct and by private friends.

The rich casket was of rosewood covered with black cloth, with six silver handles supporting ebony bars, and lined with white satin. The inscription upon the solid silver plate on the inner side of the lid was:

CHARLES McDONNELL, DIED 14TH AUGUST, 1888, AGED 46 YEARS.

The face of the dead Captain was wonderfully life-like, and bore an expression of peaceful repose that betokened the calm and painless manner of his death.

As early as 7 o'clock this morning a group began to collect in front of the house, and when the door was opened there was a steady flow of humanity through the narrow doorways and about the casket until the hour arrived for the removal of the remains.

Just before 10 o'clock the pressure was the greatest, and owing to the lack of time many who desired to view the body were obliged to go away disappointed.

A great many women who, as neighbors, had known the Captain well during his life, were so affected that they came from the house weeping.

Just after 10 o'clock the members of the Eighth Precinct came over from the station

Eighth Precinct came over from the station under the command of Sergt. Reilly and took a last look at the remains of their late Captain, and after them the six pall-bearers, inspectors, captains and other commissioned officers present went in for the same pur-pose. Then the coffin was closed.

Among those who visited the house during the morning were Inspector Byrnes, Chiefs McGill, Breslin and Lally, of the Fire De-partment: Capt. O'Connor, Capt. Sanders, Capt, Yule, Chief of Police Murphy, of Jer-sey City: ex-Alderman Morris, ex-Alderman Masterson, Clerk Peterson, Barney Biglm Masterson, Clerk Peterson. Barney Bigim and many other persons connected with the public departments of the city.

It was decided last night to have no religious services in this city, but to take the remains immediately to the depot as soon as possible after opportunity had been given the friends to view them.

The arrangements, as decided upon yesterday at the meeting of the captains, were carried out in every particular. Inspector Steers was in command of the funeral procession, which consisted of a sergeant, two roundsmen and thirty-six men from eight different precincts, and nearly the entire force of the Eighth Precinct, which was to accompany the hearse to the Grand Central Depot.

NOT OCHILTREE, NOR THE CAT.

Just a Fall from 'a Chair Lamed Iowa Clarkson's Leg.

J. S. Clarkson, of Iowa, one of the active members of the Republican National Committee, has a game leg.

He jumped on a chair the other evening to extinguish the gas, and the chair tipped. Mr. Clarkson fell heavily and hurt his ankle. "The story," said Mr. Clarkson to day,

"that I fell while chasing a cat out of my room is a canard. I had to get on the chair to turn off the gas. It is also untrue that I had spent several hours in Tom Ochiltree's com-pany. Can't a man fall from a chair without having such comments passed upon it?"

Stepped on Feldman's Pet Corn. Charles Hecht, of 184 Ludlow street, stepped on Matthew Feldman's corn in Grand street, and the latter howled with pain. The two men engaged in a wrangle and Policeman Reay brought them to

"You were foolish to mind a little thing like that," remarked Justice Duffy. "People step on my corns every day and I grin and bear it."

Peidman and Hecht had to pay $3 each.

HURRY ALONG THOSE BATS.

For They Will Be Muscots to the Glants in Their Struggle for the Pennant.

If ever mortal man felt like kicking at defeat it was yesterday. To have Capt. Adrian Anson and his colts leave this town with a record of two games won and the third a tie was harder for the New Yorks to bear than all the season's defeats rolled into one.

Tuesday's loss was bad enough; but yesterday-to be beaten by two miserable little day—to be beaten by two miserable little runs, and to accept nine goose eggs when thirteen men were left on bases—capped the horrible climax.

And what was wanting for victory? The Giants played a faultless game in the field and made nearly double the number of hits scored by their opponents. Nine hits, in this, a pitchers' year, is ordinarily a winning number, but not if, as yesterday, they be scattered throughout seven innings, and not if, as yesterday, with men on bases, succeeding batters hit the ball up in the air or strike out.

ing batters hit the ball up in the air or strike out.

Bunched hits win games just as surely as errors lose them: but successive base hits can't always be had, be they wanted never so badly.

The Giants for the past five or six weeks have been bunching their hits, have been sacrificing opportunity and have, therefore, been winning games. Yesterday they failed in all of these, and consequently lost. And if the Giants lost the game through ineffective batting then surely Mr. Baldwin, of Chicago, won the contest by effective pitching at critical moments.

If the score had been reversed and the Giants had won in the same manner as did Chicago, all the town would have sung the praises of the man who pitched for Gotham. As it is the Giants' battamen are blamed and no credit is given the opposing twirler.

As it is the Giants' batsmen are blamed and no credit is given the opposing twirler.

But the people in this town want the Giants to earn games from every pitcher who is opposed to them. There is no doubt but that the Giants, too, desire to do that very thing. A large factor in winning games is confidence. Confidence causes more base hits than any other one circumstance and oftentimes a very little thing gives a man confidence. In baseball a penny found "heads up," the presence of a mascot, the absence of a cross-syed boy, or a load of empty barrels causes a player to feel sure of hitting the ball and of winning the game.

If this, then, is true, and it is as Anson says, the Giants have again lost their grip on sand (which is confidence).

says, the Giants have again lost their grip on sand (which is confidence).

What is the matter with hurrying along those testimonial bats, and, by showing the boys that the public has not lost one jot of its confidence in them, inspire them with more confidence in themselves, and so cheer them on to further victories and the surely coming championship.

Julius Oppenheimer, manufacturer of ladies' and children's cloaks and suits in East Broadway, was the first witness. He testified that he employed 150 people during the busy season, but in June, July nd August employed less than a hundred. The employees are equally divided between the sexes. Eleven years ago, when he began business, he employed three-fourths women and one-fourth men. Wages are now 10 or

He explained that Wilinski, the man who runs the shop, was a very excitable man, and when he saw her testimony in the paper he was mad and discharged her. Wilinski is a member of the firm. Concerning Miss Preston's testimony, Mr. Oppenheimer said the only thing in it that was not true was that she testified that she was an expert hand, when she really was not. He was willing to take her back.

Mr. Oppenheimer said he gave no preference to men over women, and that he employed by preference Russians, Poles and Bohemians, and that most of his employees could speak no English.

"Then, you really discharged Marion Preston because she told the truth!" ejaculated Congressman Guenther, and the witness nodded, adding that Willinski was mad because Miss Preston mocked his broken English. He could not say whether Miss Preston earned $10 a week four years ago or not, but she earns only $4 now.

Mr. Ford said he didn't care about examining any one else from Mr. Oppenheimer's factory. He was quite satisfied—and disgusted—already.

"To what do you attribute the surplus of laborers over the demand?" asked Mr. Ford.

"I think it is because so many foreign workpeople come over. Besides, labor agitation has driven the white shirt manufacture out of New York, and if it keeps up the flannel shirt business will leave the city, too.

The meeting of the Democratic State Committee was announced for 11 o'clock this morning in the Grand Union Hotel, but there was the usual delay.

Enter New York. The apprehensions of many people that yellow fever will get brought to New York from Florida or some Atlantic seaport are not allayed by this muggy weather, which would give the epidemic such a fine send-off. The report that a Swedish sailor died of fever on the schooner Lizzie Chadwick, from Mobile, just before Health Officer William M. Smith boarded the vessel vesterday, has souls who dread the arrival of this ghastly visitant.

Dr. Smith's report, however, declares that the seaman who died, a Swede named Oscar Carlson, was afflicted with "congestive remittent fever."

At the office of the Quarantine Commission there seemed to be little solicitude on the point this morning, as it it is felt that every precaution is being exercised to prevent any importation of the drea-iful malady into this city. The Samuel D. Carleton has not yet, however, reached her station in the bay, three miles below Swinburne Island. Some delay in her equipment has prevented her from proceeding to her post. At the office of the commission they say she will certainly be there before the end of the week.

The door was then forced open, and the lodger was found lying unconscious upon his couch undressed. The room was full of gas, the stop-cock at the fixture having been opened wide. By his side upon a washstand was a box that contained rat poison, of which he had swallowed a portion.

Notwithstanding this double and determined attempt to end his existence the man's life will undoubtedly be saved. He was removed to St. Vincent's Hospital, where the stomach pump was effectually used and other

I came here to die. I have fully considered what I intend doing, but can see no other way out of my trouble. My name is William J. Soldwedel, address 28 Ten Eyck street. Brooklyn, N. Y.

Kindly let my cousin know of this as soon as possible—John Dohse, SSP Lafayette avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

My last wish is, do not let my poor mother know of this, but wait until she returns. I owe my good friend Frank K.— about $20, which kindly pay. I also oee my cousin John about $10 and my sister $16; also $25 which I collected, but squandered, all of which can be paid out of the money I have on deposit. I blame no one but myself, and hope you will not trouble good Dasy H.— as she has repeatedly tried to make me reform.

Louisville-Escape and Capture. SEPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. Louisville, Kv., Aug. 16.—Charles Dilger private policeman at the Buckingham Theatre here, killed Officers Joe Rosenberg and James Jones early this morning.

Dilger was beating his mistress in a low resort on Lafayette street when the officers attempted to arrest him. He resisted, stabbing both of them to death and made his escape. He was subsequently captured and is now in jail.

The murderer is a desperate character who has figured in a number of cutting and shooting scrapes. He will have to be guarded closely to avoid lynching, as the murdered officers were very popular.

A Dream of Fair Women.

Tennyson in his exquisite poem, dreams of a long procession of lovely women of ages past. This is all very well, but the laureate would have done the world a greater service if he had only told the women of the present how they could improve their health and enhance their charms. This he might estily have done by recommending the use of Dr. Pirkick's Favority Presentation. Health is the best friend of beauty, and the innumerable lits to which women are peculiarly subject its worst enemies. Long experience has proven that the health of womankind and the "Favority Presentation" walk hand in hand and are inseparable. It is the only medicine for women sold by drug lists under a positive quarantee from the manufacturers that it will give satisfaction in every case or money will be refunded. This goarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper and faitafully carried out for many years. A Dream of Fair Women reduced to a minimum, and any great fear-

Lockwood, Who Wanted to Turn a Victors Buildog Loose in the Cell With the Prise oner-Indignant Citizens Interfere With the Brutal Officers-Nearly a Rict.

ISPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.

NORWALK, Conn., Aug. 16.-On Monday evening Patrick Cahill, a young man notorious for indulging in drunken fights, came to this borough from the Bridgeport Jail, where he had just served out a sentence. He immediately made a round of the saloons, and was soon in fighting condition. Chief of Police John S. Lockwood saw him pass, and immediately followed him up River street.

with a large crowd at his heels. Cabill secured possession of a shovel, which he swung around him, keeping the crowd at bay, but Constable Wallace Dann leaped on him and bore him to the ground, in which condition he was delivered to Lockwood as a prisoner.

Munson Hoyt immediately fastened each end of a rope with a half hitch around Cahill's ankles, and secured him to the axle of a road wagon, driven by William E. Dann. The horse was started, and for the first half dozen yards Cahill's head was held up by the officers, but it was afterwards dropped, and he was drawn along at full length over board walks, gutters, sidewalks and pavements, the walks, gutters, sidewalks and pavements, the prisoner writhing and twisting in every way in his strugles to free himself.

Cahill grasped Lockwood's leg. Down went the chief in the mud, and he was drawn along in the procession. Boyt immediately jumped with both feet on Cahill's arm, breaking his hold and releasing Lockwood.

Down River and Wall streets the procession passed, the mob growing larger each moment. Threats of shooting and lynching Lockwood were freely made by the excited people.

Lockwood were freely made by the excited people.

When the prisoner would attempt to grasp the rope or axle to relieve the strain on his ankles, Lockwood's night club would come down with terrible lores on his fingers, and Cahill would fall back exhausted.

After a quarter of a mile had been passed in this manner the mob closed in on the officers and stopped the wagon, P. H. Dwyer, a prominent citizen, grasping the bridle of the horse. The driver became frightened, but Munson Hoyt grasped the reins and tried to urge the horse through the crowd, but in yain.

to urge the horse through the crowd, but in yain.

John Malone stepped out of his store and untied the rope, and Cahill was carried bodily to the lockup, where he smashed benches, the stove and other articles.

Chief Lockwood then ordered Keeper Gehebe to put his bulldog, one of the most vicious brutes in town, in the room to catch Cahill, in order that he might be put in a cell.

When Lockwood came on duty again a very large crowd met and hissed him, and seemed to do everything to provoke him, but he was rather nervous and let the matter pass. Nesterday morning Cahill was brought before Justice Andrew Selleck. The prisoner presented a horrible appearance. His clothes were torn, large lumps appeared on the back of his head, and his face was badly blackehed. He was charged with drunkenness, breach of the peace and resistance to officers. The trial lasted all day and Cahill was fined $7 and costs for drunkenness, and bound over to the Superior Court on the other two charges.
